

Mike Koehn on his Fiatallis 605B Loader. Noah's Building Service has come to rely on their Fiatallis for unequalled power and "uptime". In the machine's 1100 hours it has never been down. "It does a lot of work," says Mike, "and when working in tight quarters its short turning radius is essential."

Noah's Building Service

Noah has retired, and Mike carries on as Countryside Excavating

ONE-HUNDRED AND THREE KOEHNS (pronounced CAIN) live in Moundridge, Kansas. As they say in Moundridge, "Even if it's dry, we can still raise Koehn".

Noah, Lowell & Mike

There are so many Koehns in Moundridge that ten years ago when one of them wanted to start his own construction company he had to name it after his first name to avoid confusion. Today, after ten years of successful projects, Noah's Building Service is still going strong.

Noah Koehn started his company primarily as a source of income to supplement his farming operation. But as Noah says, "I finally had to quit my hobby and go to work." Today instead of raising grain and livestock, Noah is raising churches and houses.

Noah launched his business and soon afterward his sons Lowell and Mike joined the company. Today the "boys" are equal partners with their Dad; Mike is in charge of equipment and Lowell is in charge of job estimating, bidding, and billing.

The Koehns are Holdeman Mennonites and their projects are done within a strict framework of quality and pride. Most of their jobs are within seventy-five miles of Moundridge although they have done jobs as far away as Colby and Northern Oklahoma.

Sellers Tractor Company is proud of our association with Noah's Building Service. The Koehns expect from us the same "quality and pride" they show their own customers. We know this. And we know we exist because of such relationships between our customers and the services we provide. Noah's Building Service is happy with their Fiatallis Loader and we intend to keep them that way.
